MEMORANDUM

TO:

Director, Interdepartmental Foreign Information

Organization

FROM:

Acting Chairman, Interdepartmental Foreign

Information Staff. 4 P8.

There is transmitted herewith an IFIS staff study on organizational limitations within the Executive Branch of the U.S. Government inhibiting effective and systematic propaganda and psychological planning in support of national aims.

This study represents the views of IFIS members, and has not been coordinated with staff sections within the departments which those members represent.

The Staff would welcome an opportunity to discuss this problem with you.

- organization of the Department of State were needed for the performance of planning functions in the field of propaganda. (Department of State members non-concur in this observation and feel that study shoul also be devoted to organizational arrangements in other U.S. department is and agencies.) This problem divides itself into two categories: First, lack at the present time of an organizational structure within either IFIO, IFIS, or P/POL adequate to provide for complete and systematic performance of their functions and responsibilities; second, and regarizational position within the government too far from the sources of steaded and political thinking either to contribute timely giving return the second clause of this sentence.)
- A. The Staff recognizes that our democratic form of Government and our cultural heritage impose limitations to planning and use of propaganda as an instrument of national policy. Because in is not in Approved For Release 2003/07/31: CIA-RDP80R01731R003500150003-9 the American tradition to view peace and war as a continuum, there is an arbitrary division of responsibility for peace and for war between the Department of State and the Department of Defense which imposes upon an interdepartmental organization such as IFIS (and IFIO) the burden of continually re-examining and re-arguing the distinctions of responsibility for planning in the fields of propaganda and paychelogical warfare.

- 5. Despite these fundamental limitations to planning, it as believed that the seriousness of the present international conflict and the present mood of American public opinion suggest the possibility that some organizational steps can be taken now to provide for a sore systematic and effective contribution to the psychological and propaganda aspects of national planning and policy formulation.
- 6. The contribution which the planner of propagands and percentional level includes the following:
  - a. Provision for comprehensiveness of plans.

Under this category he can assure that all matical policies stemming from either National Security Council decision and papers or from foreign policy decisions are supported by complet and correlated plans which utilize to the fullest the latest fruits of scientific research. In addition, he can assure that plans are reparation support of national values, aims, and ideology.

b. Analysis of the psychological, prestige and moral aspects of impending decisions in periods of crisis.

- and behavior in the interest of U.S. national aims.
- d. Integration of the psychological element with the political, military and economic elements of national paper
- 7. It is felt that there has been a failure to recognize fully the need for comprehensive planning in this field or to take adequate steps to remedy this deficiency, including the treation of a strong organization necessary for this purpose. We halieve that a task of such national importance demands the systematic application of the greatest intellectual resources of our country. We halieve the present practices do not indicate adequate recognition of the manifolial complexity, or the scale of conception which this task imposes
- 8. The chief organizational needs of the propagandist which will permit him to make that contribution are:
- a. Ready access to those who make governmental decisions. This was demonstrated in the last war. Whereas the British provided for direct access of the Political Warfare Executive to the Prime Minister, Foreign Minister, and Minister of Information, the Director of OWI had but intermittent contact with the President and his chief advisors.
- b. An internal organizational structure to support him by systematic comprehensive planning.
- c. Official and ready access to highest level governmental papers, including NSC reports necessary to comprehensive and time!

- d. Access to all scientific skills meeded to provide adequate advice in planning.
- 9. The present organizational structure does not adequated recet these needs.
- a. Although the Director of IFIC has direct actess in the Secretary of State, it is felt that present organizational arrates—ments do not enable him to maintain all necessary day—to-far cortacts at the highest governmental level.
- b. P/POL and IFI3 are not at present systematically to ganized to fulfill all the functions and responsibilities devolting upon national propaganda planners and information policy tovisons.
- c. P/POL and IFIS are greatly inadequate in number of personnel to perform these functions and responsibilities, the magnitude and intricacy of which demand staffs of a different traor of size.
- 10. There are basic reasons for U.S. organizational and off units:
  weaknesses which are not attributable to individual planning fall ares.
- a. The basic structure of our government is not readily adaptable to giving national propaganda its proper place.
- b. Within and without our government, there is an all-bervasive lack of a proper conception of the power basis of international.

  politics and the fact that war and peace are a continuum.

· c.

Within the Department of State there is a widely felt lack of belief in the applicability of planning procedures to this field. (Army, Navv, and Air Force)

Within the Government there is still a lack of ball of is some quarters in the applicability of planning procedures to this field. (Shate & C.)

VIEW B

The organizational recomm nostrons which are made herein are based upon the premise that responsibility in this field will remain with this peace, and are without projucted to the status or fiture of NSC-//b and NSC-//L/2, (Department of Sidis position on NSC-//L)
(Navy and Air Force)

12. The following recommendations are made with respect to the internal organization of P/POL and IFIO (including IFIS):

VIEW A

- a. (1) P/POL and IFIS should each be organized into staff sub-divisions which provide for the execution of all responsibilities assigned to those staffs. This means with respect to IFIS that it should cease operating as a committee and should be organized along the lines indicated in Enclosure A of IFIS-5, August 4, 1950, (attached) which has been approved by IFIO as a basis for further planning.
- (2) Members of IFIS should act as experts rather than as representatives.
- (3) P/POL should likewise provide for a functional division of responsibilities to insure that its planning is projected further into the future than at present. (Army and CIA)

VIEW B

a. IFIO and that portion of P/POI responsible for the formulation of policy should be organized as a matter of urgency* into a staff which provides for the execution of all responsibilities indicated under the general concept of Emclosure A, IFIS-5, August 4, 1950, (attached).**

- * Underlined for emphasis.
- ** Since Par. 12, Sec.b, c, dare in consonance
  with VIEW B above, no
